Facts

A. Red for Ed Movement

14. In the fall of 2019, teachers and administrators in Frankton Schools began discussing and supporting the “Red for Ed” movement in Indiana.

15. Red for Ed is a “movement” supported by the National Education Association<sup>1</sup> (“NEA”), the public school teachers’ union.

16. The Red for Ed movement is described on the NEA website as a “fight” for “students, educators, and communities.” See n. 1. Some of the stated goals of the Red for Ed movement include: “classrooms that are conducive to learning, a voice in shaping education policy, salaries that allow educators to afford to stay in the profession they love without having to work another job, and access to opportunities, no matter what you look like, where you’re from, or how much money your parents have.”

17. Red for Ed places particular emphasis on public school teachers’ salaries, the “pay gap” teachers allegedly have “[c]ompared to other professionals with the same education and years of experience,” and what each state spends on education.

<sup>1</sup> Information about the NEA as a union for public school teachers can be found at: <https://www.nea.org/home/2580.htm?cpssessionid=SID-7A80A481-D24FF22A>. Information regarding the NEA’s support of the Red for Ed movement can be found at: <http://neatoday.org/redfored/>

18. In the fall of 2019, Frankton Schools’ teachers were encouraged to wear red t-shirts in order to promote the Red for Ed movement. Teachers were encouraged to talk about the Red for Ed movement if students or parents asked about it.

19. Red for Ed involves issues of teachers’ salaries, “education policy,” “classrooms conducive to learning,” and “access to opportunities” in public schools, which necessarily involve questions of state and local funding through taxation and a host of other political questions within the sphere of public discussion and debate. All of these questions are matters of public concern.

20. Ms. McWilliams became concerned about some of the specific goals, methods, and tactics used by the Red for Ed movement.

21. Because of Ms. McWilliams’ concerns regarding the Red for Ed movement, she started an Indiana chapter of “Purple for Parents” in the fall of 2019. Purple for Parents is a national organization that is dedicated to improving public education through empowering parents by: “preventing future teacher strikes, expanding school choice, responsibly funding schools and teachers, ending politicking in the classroom, ending indoctrination in schools, and adding resource officers to every school.”<sup>2</sup>

22. Ms. McWilliams did not advocate for Purple for Parents to students, parents, or teachers during school hours or on school property. She wore a Purple for Parents t-shirt or other purple t-shirt on some Wednesdays when other teachers wore Red for Ed t-shirts, but she discontinued wearing those shirts to school after reconsidering their appropriateness in light of her concerns about teachers wearing Red for Ed t-shirts to school. She had a few, very brief conversations with teachers regarding Purple for Parents during school hours, but only in response to questions other teachers asked her. None of those conversations were long, nor were they confrontational or contentious. Over the holiday season, Purple for Parents started receiving public recognition, including two articles published in local newspapers about the organization.

23. Around November of 2019, Ms. McWilliams was informed by Kimm Gray that she was being “investigated” because some teachers complained she had developed and taught her reading students lessons about identifying “fake news.” Ms. McWilliams flatly denied she had ever taught such lessons or taught her students anything other than the approved school curriculum.

24. After Thanksgiving break, Ms. McWilliams was informed by Kimm Gray that the school officials determined the teachers who made the accusations against her were being untruthful. Ms. Gray confirmed that the “investigation” was resolved completely in Ms. McWilliams’ favor, and that the school found no evidence that Ms. McWilliams had ever taught anything other than approved school curriculum to her students.

25. On January 5, 2020, Ms. McWilliams sent an email to Frankton School Superintendent, Bobby Fields. In that email, Ms. McWilliams expressed concern about the Red for Ed “political operation” being promoted in the Frankton Schools and whether such promotion was in violation of Indiana law.<sup>3</sup> She informed Mr. Fields she had concerns about:

<sup>3</sup> Ms. McWilliams acknowledges that the Indiana law she referenced in her email, I.C. § 3-14-1-17, does not pertain to Red for Ed since it is not a “public question” defined as a

- using Frankton Schools email system to encourage staff to wear their red shirt on Wednesdays, with the approval of the administration, in order to promote Red for Ed;
- using Frankton Schools email system to encourage teachers to join a “rallying political fight on November 19, 2019” regarding Red for Ed, which included opinions and statistics on why teachers and staff should participate in this fight;
- an email on November 14, 2019, from Mr. Fields expressing his support for the Red for Ed movement—this email stated Mr. Fields was in favor of teachers missing school to attend the November 19th rally, but he would rather they “use a Flex Day” to make up the day, rather than an “E-Learning Day;”
- staff and administrators at Frankton Elementary Schools asking the students to wear red in support of Red for Ed during the week of November 19th (the week of the Red for Ed Rally);
- encouraging students and teachers to show their support for Red for Ed during the Frankton Elementary School intercom announcements on Monday, November 18, 2020;
- teachers emailing parents, encouraging the parents to send their kids to school wearing red in support of the Red for Ed movement; and
- red signs supporting Red for Ed on the Frankton Elementary school grounds.

In short, Ms. McWilliams expressed concern to Mr. Fields that all of these activities and promotions to the students, parents, and teachers were “political overreach” and an inappropriate use of school resources to promote a political agenda.

26. Monday, January 6, 2020, was the first day Frankton Schools were back in session after winter break. On that day, Mr. Fields came to Frankton Elementary School and pulled Ms.

“constitutional amendment, proposition, or other issue submitted to the electorate at an election.” I.C. § 3-5-2-41. As a lay person, Ms. McWilliams equated the obvious matters of public concern pertaining to Red for Ed with the specific legal definition of “public question.”

McWilliams, Ms. Gray, and Ms. Podzielinski into a meeting. During this meeting, Mr. Fields told Ms. McWilliams that Red for Ed is “not political.” Mr. Fields said he had looked at Ms. McWilliams’ Facebook page and said she appeared to be a “far-right radical conspiracy theorist.” Throughout the rest of this meeting, Mr. Fields debated the politics surrounding the Red for Ed movement and engaged Ms. McWilliams in a conversation about her political beliefs. During this conversation, Mr. Fields stated that Ms. McWilliams “has a right to stand for what [she] believes in outside of school.”

27. In follow up email exchanges on January 7th, 12th, and 13th, Mr. Fields and Ms. McWilliams engaged in more back and forth regarding the goals of Red for Ed and the appropriateness of promoting the Red for Ed movement to students and parents during school hours.

B. Leader in Me Curriculum

28. In addition to the Red for Ed promotions that began in earnest in the fall of 2019, Frankton Schools has adopted the use of the “Leader in Me” curriculum in its schools. The Leader in Me curriculum purports to be a “social emotional learning” curriculum designed to develop students’ skills in the area of leadership, conflict resolution, and social interactions.

29. The Leader in Me was a book authored by Stephen Covey. The curriculum was developed by Franklin Covey as a way for schools to incorporate the “7 Habits” principles developed by Stephen Covey into all aspects of the school’s culture.

30. Ms. McWilliams has concerns about the widespread incorporation of the Leader in Me curriculum into Frankton Schools. She is concerned that:

- the curriculum is largely based on church doctrine and results in an inappropriate combination of church and state;
- the curriculum encroaches on the teachings of morals and values, usurping the parents' primary role for such teachings in their children's lives;
- time dedicated to Leader in Me activities takes away from time better spent in academic learning;
- parents had no way to "opt out" of the curriculum as it is incorporated in virtually every aspect of the school's culture and programming;
- Frankton Schools would begin mentoring other schools to implement the Leader in Me curriculum; and
- part of the teachers' evaluations were based on how well he or she implemented the curriculum.

31. Ms. McWilliams always participated in any Leader in Me activity, lesson, etc. required as a part of her employment. Ms. McWilliams never received any negative feedback or evaluation on her job performance. In fact, all of the feedback Ms. McWilliams received from Ms. Gray (her direct supervisor) on her job performance was positive.

32. Ms. McWilliams never discussed her concerns about the Leader in Me curriculum with students.

33. Ms. McWilliams never discussed her concerns about the Leader in Me curriculum with parents on school property or during school hours.

C. Facebook Post and Termination Meeting

34. On Monday, February 10, 2020, Ms. McWilliams posted some information and comments on her personal Facebook page expressing her concerns about the Leader in Me curriculum. The concerns she posted mirrored her concerns detailed in paragraph 30 of this Complaint.

35. Ms. McWilliams posted this information on her personal Facebook page at 4:33pm, which is after school hours. She used her personal computer and personal cell phone to post and comment on her personal Facebook page. She was at home when she posted this information, not on school property.

36. On Friday, February 14, 2020, Ms. McWilliams was called into a meeting with Ms. Podzielinski and Ms. Gray.

37. During that meeting, Ms. Podzielinski told Ms. McWilliams that she had the choice to resign or be terminated from her position as a Title I teacher.

38. When Ms. McWilliams asked why she was being fired, Ms. Podzielinski and Ms. Gray stated Ms. McWilliams said things concerning the reputation of the school that were affecting teacher morale. They expressed concerns about her being a team player and spreading information that was untruthful about the school. When pressed by Ms. McWilliams about what specific statements she had made that were of concern, Ms. Podzielinski and Ms. Gray pointed to statements Ms. McWilliams had made in her personal Facebook post of February 10th.

39. Ms. McWilliams mentioned to Ms. Gray and Ms. Podzielinski that she expressed those concerns on her personal Facebook page, and that as a parent (Ms. McWilliams' daughter was enrolled at Frankton Elementary), she had a right to express concern about curriculum.

40. Ms. Gray and Ms. Podzielinski told Ms. McWilliams that "ultimately, everything every one of us does is for the school." Ms. Gray told Ms. McWilliams that if she disagreed with school programs, those disagreements could not be shared outside of school because they would reflect badly on Ms. Podzielinski.

41. Ms. McWilliams confirmed with Ms. Gray and Ms. Podzielinski that she was being fired for one social media post she made on her personal Facebook page. Ms. McWilliams refused to resign and Ms. Gray and Ms. Podzielinski then terminated her employment as a Title I Reading Teacher at Frankton Elementary.

42. At the time of Ms. McWilliams' employment, the Frankton Schools Employee Handbook did not include any policy on personal social media posts. The 2019-2020 Frankton Elementary Staff Handbook states, in relevant part:

We are all proud members of the education profession. Our acts and words should always work toward enhancing the dignity of our profession and ourselves. We are the people primarily responsible for the perception the public has of education. Everything we do and say either strengthens or weakens our image. Please be sure that all your interactions with students, parents and colleagues are conducted in a professional manner, whether in person or on social media.

43. Because of the written and implied policy of the Frankton Schools, teachers and staff believe it is the school policy that the staff cannot post "anything negative" about the school on their private social media accounts.

COUNT I:
First Amendment Retaliation
U.S. Const. Amend. I
(42 U.S.C. § 1983)
Against Defendants Ms. Podzielinski and Ms. Kimm Gray

44. Plaintiff re-alleges and incorporates by reference all previous allegations.

45. At all material times, Ms. McWilliams was engaged in constitutionally protected activity, exercising her clearly established First Amendment rights to speak as a private citizen on a matter of public concern.

46. At all material times, Ms. McWilliams was speaking as a private citizen and was not speaking as part of her official duties as a Title I Reading Instructor at Frankton Elementary School. See Pickering v. Bd. of Educ., 391 U.S. 563, 564 (1968); Garcetti v. Ceballos, 547 U.S. 410 (2006).

47. At all material times, Ms. McWilliams was speaking on matters of public education, public school curriculum, public school funding, and government taxation—all well-established areas of public concern. See Connick v. Myers, 461 U.S. 138 (1983).

48. Defendants Podzielinski and Gray, acting under the color of state law, terminated Ms. McWilliams' employment as a Title I Reading Teacher, causing direct adverse action against Ms. McWilliams. See I.C. § 20-26-5-4.5.

49. Defendants Podzielinski and Gray were motivated to take this adverse employment action against Ms. McWilliams in whole or in part because of Ms. McWilliams' constitutionally protected speech.

50. Defendants Podzielinski's and Gray's adverse employment action violated Ms. McWilliams' clearly established First and Fourteenth Amendment rights and was unlawful in light of clearly established law. No reasonable person would have believed otherwise, given the state of the law and Defendants' motivations. Defendants are liable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983.

51. Neither Defendant Podzielinski nor Defendant Gray is entitled to qualified immunity because Ms. McWilliams' constitutional rights were clearly established at the time they fired her, and because qualified immunity does not apply to requests for declaratory or injunctive relief.

52. As a direct and proximate result of Defendant Podzielinski's and Defendant Gray's unlawful activity, Ms. McWilliams has suffered harm by being deprived of her employment in Frankton Schools, and her employment record is tarnished, which will lead to decreased future employment options.

COUNT II:
First Amendment Retaliation
U.S. Const. Amend. I
(42 U.S.C. § 1983)
Against Defendant Bobby Fields

53. Plaintiff re-alleges and incorporates by reference all previous allegations.

54. Defendant Bobby Fields, acting under the color of state law, as Superintendent of Frankton Schools, is responsible for overseeing the schools in the district on policy and employment decisions, including Frankton Elementary School. See I.C. § 20-26-5-4.5.

55. As Superintendent, Bobby Fields displayed a history of criticizing Ms. McWilliams' constitutionally protected speech concerning Red for Ed when he called her a "far right wing conspiracy theorist" in front of her direct supervisor, Ms. Gray, and the school principal, Ms. Podzielinski. That this criticism happened at school, in the context of an employment disciplinary meeting, caused harm to Ms. McWilliams by effectively labeling her as a "troublemaker" for exercising her constitutional right to free speech.

56. As Defendant Fields is responsible for overseeing employment decisions at Frankton Elementary School, he was aware of the motivation for the adverse employment action taken against Ms. McWilliams.

57. Defendant Fields' adverse employment action violated Ms. McWilliams' clearly established First and Fourteenth Amendment rights and was unlawful in light of clearly established law. No reasonable person would have believed otherwise, given the state of the law and Defendant's motivations. Defendant Fields is liable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983.

58. Defendant Fields is not entitled to qualified immunity because Ms. McWilliams' constitutional rights were clearly established at the time she was fired, and because qualified immunity does not apply to requests for declaratory or injunctive relief.

59. The combination of Defendant Fields' January employment disciplinary meeting and his approval and oversight of Ms. McWilliams' employment termination establishes a pattern of adverse employment actions based upon Ms. McWilliams' exercise of First Amendment rights.

60. As a direct and proximate result of Defendant Fields' unlawful activity, Ms. McWilliams has suffered harm by being deprived of her employment in Frankton Schools, and her employment record is tarnished, which will lead to decreased future employment options.

COUNT III:
First Amendment Retaliation
U.S. Const. Amend. I
(42 U.S.C. § 1983)
Against Defendants Frankton-Lapel Community Schools Building Corporation and Frankton-Lapel Community Schools Board of School Trustees

61. Plaintiff re-alleges and incorporates by reference all previous allegations.

62. Defendants Frankton Schools and the Frankton Board, acting under the color of state law, are ultimately responsible for policy and employment decisions at all the schools within the Frankton-Lapel school district, including Frankton Elementary School. See I.C. § 20-26-5-4.5.

63. Frankton Schools and the Frankton Board have established written policies which give its employees the impression that they cannot ever, even on their own time, criticize Frankton Schools or its curriculum or funding decisions that are matters of broad public concern. This policy is impermissibly broad under the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

64. As Defendants Frankton Schools and the Frankton Board are ultimately responsible for employment decisions and policy at Frankton Elementary School, they were aware of the motivation for the adverse employment action taken against Ms. McWilliams.

65. Defendants Frankton Schools' and the Frankton Board's adverse employment action violated Ms. McWilliams' clearly established First and Fourteenth Amendment rights and were unlawful in light of clearly established law. No reasonable person would have believed otherwise, given the state of the law and Defendants' motivations. Defendants Frankton Schools and the Frankton Board are liable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983.

66. Defendants Frankton Schools and the Frankton Board are not entitled to qualified immunity because Ms. McWilliams' constitutional rights were clearly established at the time she was fired, and because qualified immunity does not apply to requests for declaratory or injunctive relief.

67. As a direct and proximate result of Defendants Frankton Schools' and the Frankton Board's unlawful activity, Ms. McWilliams has suffered harm by being deprived of her employment in Frankton Schools, and her employment record is tarnished, which will lead to decreased future employment options.

Prayer for Relief

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff prays for the relief set forth below:

1. Declare that Defendant Podzielinski's and Defendant Gray's adverse employment action violated Plaintiff's right to exercise her freedom of speech under the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the U.S. Constitution;

2. Declare that Defendant Fields' adverse employment action violated Plaintiff's right to exercise her freedom of speech under the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the U.S. Constitution;

3. Declare that Defendants Frankton Schools' and the Frankton Board's adverse employment action violated Plaintiff's right to exercise her freedom of speech under the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the U.S. Constitution;

4. Declare that Defendants Frankton Schools' and the Frankton Board's policies regarding employees' private speech are impermissibly broad and violated Plaintiff's clearly established right to exercise her freedom of speech under the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the U.S. Constitution;

5. Preliminarily and permanently enjoin Plaintiff's employment termination, restoring her employment as a Title I Reading Instructor in Frankton Elementary School;

6. Preliminarily and permanently enjoin any and all Defendants from mentioning or referring to Plaintiff's employment termination by requiring Defendants to expunge the record of her employment termination from her Frankton Schools' employment records;

7. Award all costs and expenses of bringing this action, including attorneys' fees, costs, and expenses; and

8. Grant any other relief this Court deems appropriate.
